7 BEATS PER MINUTE

CAST Jessea Lu
DIRECTOR Yuqi Kang
GENRE Documentary
RATING Unclassified PG
DURATION 100 mins
LANGUAGE English, Mandarin
COUNTRY Canada
YEAR 2024

In the world of competitive free diving, Jessea Lu (Lu Wenjie) is a legendary figure. The Chinese free diving champion came late to the sport, vaulting into the top tier of talent with remarkable ability and a compulsive drive to challenge her limitations. But in the ocean, you cannot hide from yourself.

In a deep dive, when consciousness shrinks to a singular point, any mistake can prove disastrous. During a world-record attempt in 2018, Jessea blacked out and was lifeless for four minutes.

Award-winning director Yuqi Kang's feature documentary 7 Beats Per Minute parallels Jessea's physical and mental journey back from the depths, with intimate cinéma vérité camera work, astonishing underwater imagery and raw personal interviews.

As the boundaries between the filmmaker and her subject grow more fluid, the two return to the site of Jessea's near-death experience to face the traumas of her past and find a way back to light, air and, ultimately, connection.

ARCHITECTON

From filmmaker Victor Kossakovsky (Guna, Aquarela) comes an epic, intimate and poetic meditation on architecture and how the design and construction of buildings from the ancient past reveal our destruction – and offer hope for survival and a way forward.

Centering on a landscape project by the Italian architect Michele De Lucchi, Kossakovsky uses the circle to reflect on the rise and fall of civilizations, capturing breathtaking imagery from the temple ruins of Baalbek in Lebanon, dating back to AD 60, to the recent destruction of cities in Turkey following a 7.8 magnitude earthquake in early 2023.

Rock and stone connect the disparate societies, from ghostly monoliths stuck in the earth to tragic heaps of concrete rubble waiting to be hauled off and repurposed anew. Through Kossakovsky's inquisitive lens, the grandeur and folly of humanity and its precarious relationship with nature posits the urgent questions: How do we build and how can we build better, before it's too late?

An examination of the iconic 90s indie band, PAVEMENTS appears to be just another music documentary, until it doesn't.

A prismatic, narrative, scripted, documentary, musical, metatextual hybrid, the film intimately shows the band preparing for their sold-out 2022 reunion tour while simultaneously tracking the preparations for a musical based on their songs, a museum devoted to their history and a big-budget Hollywood biopic inspired by their saga as the most important band of a generation.

Big dreams wrestle bitter truths as three teenage girls pursue Olympic history. Shot over seven years, this coming-of-age documentary chronicles the journey from childhood to adulthood and the moments that define us.

Queens of Concrete is a seven-year journey following three talented young skateboarders—Hayley (14), Ava (13), and Charlotte (9)—each with dreams of representing Australia at the Olympic Games. Nationally recognised as top competitors in their age groups, these girls are strong contenders. However, as childhood naivety fades, their Olympic ambitions evolve into a tale of resilience, triumph, and self-discovery.

Navigating life lessons, heartbreak, betrayal, a global pandemic, and pressure beyond their years, they emerge with a deeper understanding of themselves and their aspirations. Ultimately, Queens of Concrete celebrates their enduring spirit and the hopeful realisation that, despite life's unpredictability, they have grown into strong young women who have each found their own path forward.

THE HAKA PARTY INCIDENT

On May 1st, 1979, a group of young Māori and Pasifika activists, He Taua, confronted a gathering of University of Auckland engineering students as they rehearsed their 'mock' haka.

The fracas that followed prompted the nation to confront systemic racism and make change for a better and more equal partnership between Pākehā and Māori.

Although the aftermath of the clash changed race relations in Aotearoa forever, the incident itself was quickly forgotten. Until now...

Revolves around a young mother facing challenges when her son fails to secure passing marks, igniting events that test the family's resilience and unity.

In a modest home near the Tirupathi temple, 28-year-old homemaker Saraswathi and her husband Prasad, a bus conductor, live with their sons Arun (11) and Varun (10). At 16, Saraswathi chose marriage over education out of love for Prasad. Her lack of formal schooling becomes a challenge when Arun struggles with math, particularly the concept of zero, leading to poor grades and humiliation from his teacher, Chanakya. The situation worsens with Arun's suspension and Prasad's decision to hold him back a year.

Their journey underscores the power of perseverance, family support, and community intervention in overcoming adversity.
